PREFACE

This Guide is published as part of the Nevada Women's Archives Project. Established in 1992 at the Special Collections Department of the Library at the University of Nevada, Reno, the Project is a statewide effort to collect, preserve, catalog, and provide accessibility to the papers and records of Nevada women and women's organizations.

The Special Collections Department develops and maintains subject collections pertaining to the history of the region: Nevada and the Great Basin, Great Basin Indians, and Women in the West. These collections include books and other print materials, manuscript collections, historical photographs, and maps. Although the manuscript collections are particularly strong in certain subject areas, prior to implementing the Nevada Woman's Archives Project, there were fewer women's collections. The goals of the Project, designed to improve that situation, are:

1. To survey the state of Nevada and acquire for the department, women's manuscripts and papers now in private ownership.
2. To arrange and describe women's collections in the department.
3. To prepare catalog entries for those women's collections for the University's online catalog and for OCLC, a national online library database.
4. To compile information for an annotated guide to women's manuscript and archival collections in the department which will be published after the close of the project.
5. To compile information for a guide to women's collections in libraries, museums, archives, historical societies, and other repositories in Nevada which will be published and widely distributed.
6. To educate individuals and organizations throughout the state about the importance of women in Nevada's history and of preserving and making available, papers and records which document that history.

The project has enjoyed enormous success and has seen the emergence of a similar project in the Special Collections Department of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. This Guide is the fulfillment of goal five above.

CONTENT

The Guide contains information on women's archival and manuscript materials found in Nevada libraries, archives, museums, and other public institutions. The survey which located these materials also investigated repositories in bordering communities in California, Utah, and Arizona. The sizes of the collections in these repositories vary, along with the facilities offered for research-many do not have reading rooms or copying facilities. Not all of the collections are fully cataloged, but all are available for use by researchers.

The listing of a person, organization or subject heading indicates that some type of archival material is available at the given repository; it can be as little as a few items or as much as many cubic feet. Locating material at an institution was dependent on several factors: the availability of survey staff to personally visit the site, the presence of pre-existing indexes and catalogs at each repository, and the availability of repository staff to assist the project surveyor. Researchers should also be aware that repositories may have other holdings of both primary and secondary source materials which are not identified in this Guide.

Considerable effort has been made to assure the accuracy and completeness of each repository entry. Since the information is subject to change at any time, readers are encouraged to contact all repositories before making visits to ensure the availability of materials and to determine the accuracy of addresses and hours.

Please note that in December 1998, the area code for all of Nevada with the exception of most parts of Clark County/Las Vegas will change to 775.

NOTE ABOUT "ACCESS POINTS" FOR ARCHIVAL MATERIAL

Repositories use a variety of means to point researchers to manuscript and archival collections.

Larger repositories such as Washoe County Library, Nevada State Library and Archives, UNR and UNLV, catalog their primary sources into online catalogs such as UNR's WolfPAC. They may also provide electronic links from individual catalog records to specific collection guides. In addition, more detailed information about larger collections is available in finding aids, often referred to as "collection guides."

Smaller institutions without online catalogs, e.g. Nevada Historical Society, catalog archival materials into their card catalog and provide collection guides for larger collections.

Repositories with fewer human resources may or may not have card catalogs or enter information about archival collections into those catalogs. They may have special indexes created by staff or volunteers, or they may simply integrate primary source materials into the equivalent of vertical files. It is not unusual for staff to rely on "institutional memory" to locate materials.

In all cases, it is always wise to ask for assistance from the staff on duty. If the institution employs open book stack areas, browse through the shelves and cabinets open to the public. Examine drawers of card catalogs for special indexes or look for binders available in public areas which might contain information.

DATA COLLECTION METHODS

Between March, 1993 and November, 1996, approximately one hundred and ninety-five entities within Nevada and border communities in California, Utah, and Arizona were surveyed. These publicly accessible institutions included the following:

- Libraries and archives - public, academic, special
- Historical museums and societies
- Military bases
- State and national parks and recreation areas
- Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Family History Centers
- Miscellaneous other institutions

The survey was conducted by mail and by on-site and telephone interviews. The purpose was to inform institutions about the Nevada Women's Archives Project and ascertain the extent to which they:

Had unpublished materials (archives, manuscripts, personal papers, records, documents, photographs, newspaper clippings, scrapbooks, oral history tapes and/or transcripts, documentary videos, etc);
 Provided public access to these materials; and,
 Were willing to be included in the published Guide.

In most instances, a draft entry summarizing the information gathered was prepared and sent to the repository contact for review and comment. As the final deadline approached, telephone and fax were used to communicate the draft content.

ARRANGEMENT

This Guide is arranged by state, county, and repository names in alphabetical order. Each entry contains basic information about location, access, and the nature of the archival materials available.

There are two indexes: an alphabetical index of repositories and an alphabetical index of personal names, organizations, and subject headings found within the entries.

A list of abbreviations used in the Guide, list of locations of Nevada newspaper indexes, glossary of archival terms, and list of repositories surveyed but not included are provided in the Appendix.

Copies of initial questionnaire and explanatory letter to repositories are provided in the appendix.

SOURCES NOT COVERED

The following sources were not included in this Guide:

Newspapers.

Newspapers are valuable resources for researchers but for the purpose of this Guide were not considered as primary resources. For information on the history of Nevada newspapers and their locations consult The Newspapers of Nevada: A History & Bibliography, 1854-1979 by Richard E. Lingenfelter and Karen Rix Gash (Reno: University of Nevada Press, 1984). Most Nevada newspapers are available on microfilm at the University of Nevada, Reno; University of Nevada, Las Vegas; the Nevada State Library; and the Nevada Historical Society, as well as in hard copy at many local libraries and historical societies/museums. A number of libraries have indexed their local newspaper holdings and they are noted in the appropriate entries in this Guide. The appendix provides a comprehensive list of indexed newspaper titles, dates, and location of indexes.

County records.

Public records are rich sources of information about women and women's legal status in Nevada. They include, but are not limited to birth, marriage, and death records; deed, mortgage, and homestead filings; civil and criminal court records; assessment rolls; and probate and guardianship records. Microfilm copies of early county records of Douglas, Lyon, Ormsby, Storey, and Washoe Counties; and Utah and Nevada Territories are available at the Nevada State Library and Archives, the Special Collections Department of the University of Nevada, Reno Library, and the Nevada Historical Society, Reno. Otherwise, county records are held by the originating agencies of individual counties, i.e., the County Clerk, County Recorder, County Assessor, etc.

Federal records.

Records created by the United States government are also excellent sources for the study of the history of women in Nevada. The National Archives and Records Administration collects, preserves, maintains, and makes available federal records considered to have historical and research value. Two branches in California contain federal records created in Nevada. For records of northern California, Nevada (except for Clark County), Hawaii, and the Pacific Ocean area, contact

NON-NEVADA REPOSITORIES

Extensive records about Nevada subjects, including women, exist in repositories outside the state. In particular, the Bancroft Library of the University of California, Berkeley; the California State Library, Sacramento; and the Huntington Library, San Marino, California, have rich holdings pertaining to Nevada history. Other California institutions have collections of Nevada material, as do notable national research institutions such as Yale, the Library of Congress, and the Newberry Library.

STAFF

The field work for the Nevada Women's Archives Project was conducted by Jean Ford, Project Surveyor, who also compiled this Guide. Susan Searcy, Manuscript Curator of Special Collections and Project Director of the Nevada Women's Archives Project; and Robert E. Blesse, Head of Special Collections, provided final review and preparation of the text for publication.

NEVADA WOMEN'S ARCHIVES ADVISORY BOARD

The Advisory Board, an appointed group with statewide representation, met several times during the project and offered valuable input on several aspects of the survey and resulting publication. Board members are:

Sharon Allen, Library Director, Humboldt County Library
 Carol Corbett, former Archivist, Nevada Women's Archives at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas
 Doris Dwyer, Professor of History, Western Nevada Community College
 Rosemary Flores, Director of Public Relations, Sierra Pacific Power Company
 Vikki Ford, Owner, The Ford Factor Public Relations
 Melanie Meehan-Crossley, Nevada Deputy Attorney General
 Peter Michel, Head, Special Collections Department, University of Nevada, Las Vegas
 Dennis Myers, Journalist
 Elizabeth Raymond, Professor of History, University of Nevada, Reno
 Elmer Rusco, Professor Emeritus, Department of Political Science, University of Nevada, Reno
 Lisa Seymour, Director, Northeastern Nevada Museum
 Jean Stoess, Writer, Consultant, and former Washoe County Commissioner
 Carley Sullivan, former member, Nevada State Board of Education

FUNDING

With gratitude and thanks we acknowledge the generous financial gifts and grants to the project from the following individuals and organizations:

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many thanks are due to all those individuals and institutions who responded to the questionnaires, interviews, and site visits on which this publication is based. The Nevada Women's Archives Project staff was overwhelmed and encouraged by the number of Nevada institutions who possess, care for, and provide access to primary source materials. It is our hope that others will come to enjoy and utilize these treasures because of this Guide.

APPENDIX B

GLOSSARY OF ARCHIVAL TERMS

The following glossary of archival terms is based on A Glossary for Archivists, Manuscript Curators, and Records Managers, compiled by Lewis J. Bellardo and Lynn Lady Bellardo (Chicago: Society of American Archivists, 1992).

Archives:	can be (1) documents created or accumulated in the course of conduct of affairs and preserved because of their continuing value; also referred to as archival materials; (2) an agency, such as a library, which assumes responsibility for selecting, preserving, and making available archival materials; (3) the building or part of a building where such materials are located; sometimes called repository.
Collection:	(1) an artificial accumulation of manuscripts or documents with common characteristics: creator, subject, etc.; (2) a grouping of records created by an individual or organization; (3) in singular or plural form, the total holdings - accessions and deposits - of a repository.
Document:	recorded information; a single item, such as a letter, memo, project notes, etc.; frequently used interchangeably with record.
Finding Aid:	description of a specific collection, created by the repository, to establish physical and intellectual control over that collection, and to summarize information about that collection for researchers.
Manuscript:	handwritten or typed document, original or copy, usually having historical or literary value or significance.
Oral history transcript:	written product from an audio tape of one or more planned oral interviews of an individual with the use of a sound recorder.
Papers:	personal and family documents; in general, used to designate more than one type of material.
Personal papers:	documents belonging to an individual.
Record:	a document created or maintained by an agency, business, or organization in pursuance of its legal obligations or in the transaction of its business; can include minutes, newsletters, membership lists, financial papers, etc.
Repository:	where documents are kept; see also archives.
Restricted access:	a limitation placed on the use of certain papers or collections, usually by the donor or for legal reasons.
Vertical files:	cardboard or metal file drawers with file folders of information on various topics; can include news clippings, manuscripts, photographs, pamphlets, article reprints. Often arranged alphabetically by subject or name.

Date _____

To: _____

From: Jean Ford, Nevada Women's Archives

Attached is a draft summary of information we gathered from you for inclusion in our Nevada Women's History: A Guide to Primary Sources which will be published in late 1996. A draft Table of Contents for that publication is also included.

Please review for accuracy the entry for the _____ and make any corrections on the draft in red ink; use margins, if needed, or attach a separate memo.

Feel free to attach additional information pertinent to the various categories of information, keeping in mind the following:

- * Our emphasis is on unpublished materials containing information about (1) the lives or roles of women who have lived or are living in Nevada and (2) women's organizations in Nevada or organizations composed primarily of women or whose cause primarily affects women; give us specific names, where possible.

- * We are including reference to oral history transcripts by or about Nevada women.

- * We are not giving details of access to Nevada newspapers in specific repositories in this Guide but will indicate in the Preface the major sources of information on this topic.

- * We have found Vertical Files in many repositories to be a rich resource about Nevada women. Please include any file headings of individual women under "Biography" or files identified as "Nevada-Women" or under local history headings.

- * We particularly need updating of "Access to Holdings" regarding any on-line computer system, access to Internet, etc. you may have or plan to have in the near future.

Please sign your name and the date on the top of the draft entry and return with your comments by _____ so that we may make any corrections and proceed with preparation for publication. OR you can call me with changes: 702-322-7754.

We do appreciate your cooperation in this matter; the result will be a much-needed reference publication that will be distributed throughout Nevada and to major research institutions in the United States.

If you have questions, feel free to call me at 322-7754.

INDEX

The items for this index were taken directly from the repository entries and consist primarily of personal and corporate names. Subjects were included only when they were listed in a particular entry. Some general subject headings were not used, for example the term "women," since the subject of the guide IS women. Other guidelines used were:

Numbers indicate repository entry numbers, not page numbers

Library of Congress name authorities were used when possible to standardize more common names, e.g., "Annie Bronn Johnston" was used rather than "Wildhorse Annie" or "Velma Johnston."

Formal titles such as "Mrs." or "Dr." were avoided except when no forename was provided, e.g., "Mrs. J. Bartano."
